HELLER FIRST SAE/CES PREDISSERTATION FELLOWSHIP RECIPIENT

Caroline B Brettell
SAE President

Chaia L. Heller, an anthropology graduate student at U Massachusetts (Amherst) is the first recipient of the SAE/CES Pre Dissertation Research Fellowship, for a project entitled "Surveying the Biotechnology Landscape in France." Heller has a BA from Grinnell where she majored in French and philosophy, and a Master's in psychology from Antioch New England University. At U-Mass she is studying with Oriol Pi-Sunyer and Arturo Escobar.

ANTHROPOLOGISTS MAKE SIGNIFICANT GAINS AS CES PREDISSERTATION FELLOWSHIP RECIPIENTS

In the regularly-scheduled Council for European Studies (CES) Pre-Dissertation Fellowship competition, Ioannis Sinanoglou, Executive Director of the organization pointed out that anthropologists "for the first time ever . . . (in) the past 17 years . . . (made up) about one quarter of the applicants . . . and five were awarded the fellowship (two are honorary, because they received larger research fellowships from other sources)." In addition, two sociologists, three political

REPORT OF THE SECTION ASSEMBLY RETREAT, MAY 9-11, 1997

Caroline B Brettell
SAE President

The 1997 Section Assembly Retreat began at noon on Friday, May 9 with a luncheon and a visit to AAA headquarters in Arlington, Virginia. We had an hour and a half to wander through the offices and chat with various staff members about their responsibilities and problems. It was most informative. I particularly enjoyed learning about Peggy Overby's work with Congress on behalf of anthropological interests. For example, the AAA joined forces with other organizations to What follows is an abstract of Heller's proposal: Biotechnology is a steadily emerging discourse extending into realms ranging from agriculture to reproductive medicine. Transformation in industrial, medical, and agricultural practices are accompanied by changes in the vernacular understanding of "nature"; understandings which in turn reflect new motions of national and cultural identity. This exploratory project will use the ethnographic study of science to begin to examine the specific cultural settings in which biotechnology discourses emerge in France. Examining the corporate, governmental, scientific, and political contexts in which social actors produce, represent, and contest biotechnology practices, this study will hopefully shed light on the implications of French nationalism and regionalism for the shaping of both expert and popular views of biotechnology in that country.

REPORT OF THE SECTION ASSEMBLY RETREAT, MAY 9-11, 1997

testify in favor of continued support for the National Science Foundation. I was overwhelmed by the monumental job that Susan Skomol has putting together the newsletter each month. By the way, Susan encourages all of you to send in material for the commentary column.

One of the highlights of this visit was the wall of photographs of past Presidents of the AAA hanging in the conference room. Some faces were very familiar--Ruth Benedict, Franz Boas--but I had actually never seen a picture of George Peter Murdock, or Elsie Clews Parsons looking quite spectacular in a flamboyant hat.

At 4 pm we were bussed to the Georgetown University Conference Center, a nice facility at the core of the campus and attached to the student union. After dinner, Steve Barnett, Vice-President with City Corp., spoke to us about the future of anthropology and its connections with the world of business. One of his major points was that to maintain our relevance and survive we need to write more that is read by the general public and the corporate world. We have, he suggested, much to say, but it is not hitting the mainstream.

The real business of the retreat began on Saturday morning. The focus was the structural reorganization of the AAA in order to improve the relationship between the CORE (i.e. the AAA and anthropology as an integrated discipline) and the various sections. Last fall, President Yolanda Moses appointed a commission to examine this matter and members of the commission, some of whom are also section heads, were present at the retreat. They posed a series of questions to us which we addressed in small break-out groups and then as a whole. The questions were as follows:

1. How can the AAA strengthen its ability to represent and speak for anthropology comprehensively as a 4 field/2 dimension discipline.
2. How can the AAA strengthen its governance and decision-making structures (Executive Board, Commissions and Committees, Section Assembly, etc.) to provide more stability and continuity in its organizational governance and to enable it to achieve its mission, purposes and Long Range Plan effectively?
3. How can we strengthen the ability of the AAA to achieve the objectives of the Long Range Plan while also strengthening the ability of the Sections to achieve their program goals?

One of the issues embedded in the last question is the matter of finances. There seemed to be a shared sense, among those present, that the CORE was important and that the four subfields were important. A reorganization that enhances the significance of "Anthropology" as a whole appeared to be a goal that everyone wanted to move toward.

The Long Range Plan, an initiative that began under President Annette Weiner and was carried on under James Peacock's leadership, is now complete and was distributed to us ahead of time. Two of the major goals of the Long Range Plan are:

1. To advance anthropology within education, including increasing anthropological content in K-12 and continuing education curricula in the US.
2. To increase the use of anthropological knowledge and skills in developing public policy and addressing practical problems, and increase public awareness and use of anthropological knowledge and insights.

The sections are encouraged to develop their own Long-Range Plans, and particularly to consider how some of the larger goals of the Association can be implemented by and through the various sections. Certainly, these goals should be the subject of debate among the membership of SAE. It is my understanding that the entire plan has been or is about to be mounted on the AAA web page. If you have any thoughts about it in relation to the work of SAE please let me know. We will put this matter on the agenda for discussion at our Executive Committee and Business Meetings in November.

CALL FOR PAPERS:
CES ELEVENTH INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

1998 Conference Information

Eleventh International Conference of Europeanists: Europe at the End of the Millennium

February 25 -- March 1, 1998

The Council for European Studies invites proposals for its 11th biennial International Conference of Europeanists, to be held in the Spring of 1998. The conference will be held in Baltimore from February 25 through March 1, 1998.

Prospective participants should use the forms on the following pages to propose panels, roundtables, or individual papers. Prospective participants are encouraged to consider innovative panel formats, as well as mechanisms that ensure as wide a readership of papers in advance of the conference as possible. Members of the Program Committee will be happy to respond to suggestions for unusual formats. Participants are limited to presenting one paper and playing one additional role, whether as chair, discussant, or moderator. The postmark deadline for all proposals is October 30, 1997. Applicants will be notified by December 1, 1997. Please submit seven copies of all materials.

The Program Committee encourages submissions from historians and social scientists of all disciplines who seek to address matters of broad concern to students of Europe, East and West. The Program Committee has particular interest in panels which:

- are interdisciplinary and cross-national in scope;
- examine issues comparatively across Eastern and Western Europe;
- integrate gender and race into European studies;
- explore some of the broad theoretical and methodological questions concerning the relationship between area and comparative studies, and how we should study Europe as we approach the new millennium.

A set of themes of interest to the Program Committee are listed below, and proposals along these lines are welcome. This list is only an invitation, however, and prospective participants should feel free to add their own projects to an open agenda.

As in the past, the Council will attempt to provide travel subsidies of $300 per paper-giver or discussant traveling from Europe and $200 to paper-givers who are graduate students traveling to the conference from the United States or Canada. In either case, no application is required. The Council will also make every effort to meet all the costs for a limited number of paper-givers from Eastern Europe.

Themes of interest to the Program Committee include:

- Why Study Europe?
- Gendering European Studies
- Marxism, Post-Marxism, and European Studies
- Emerging East European Capitalisms
- Beyond Right and Left? The Evolution of European Party Systems
- Political, Economic, and Cultural Aspects of European Integration
- The Future of Labor as a Social and Political Actor
- European Employers in a Changing World Economy
- Legacies of European Empires
- The Gendered Welfare State
- European Borderlands in Historical and Comparative Perspective
- Producing Identities and Affinities:
  - Local/Regional/National/International Cities and Regions
- European Cinema and Mass Media
- Whither (and Whether) the Welfare State?
- Beyond -- or Back To -- the Nation-State?
- The "Americanization" of Europe
- Ethnographies of Transition in Eastern Europe
- Citizenship in Historical Perspective

The Program Committee for the 1998 Conference is composed of the following people:

Julie Adams (Sociology, University of Michigan)
jpadams@umich.edu

Peter Baldwin (History, UCLA) pbaldwin@soc.ucla.edu

Rogers Brubaker (Sociology, UCLA)

The deadline for submissions for the 1997 Student Paper Competition is fast approaching. This year a $100 prize will be awarded to the undergraduate winner and $200 to the graduate winner. Faculty, please encourage your students to enter. In addition to the prize, winning abstracts will be published in the Bulletin and all entrants will receive comments from the judges on their papers. The deadline for the 1997 competition is June 15. The following rules apply:

1. Papers must deal with some aspect of European anthropology and/or European anthropology's contribution to the broader field. This rule will be interpreted liberally to include papers of a comparative and/or general theoretical nature.
2. All submissions must follow the standard anthropological format for citations, footnotes, and "References Cited" as outlined in the American Anthropologist style guide.
3. All manuscripts must be printed or typed, double-spaced with one inch margins. The smallest allowable type is elite.
4. Maximum length for the body of the text is fifteen typed, double-spaced pages; tables, notes, and references may constitute additional pages.
5. The author's name, address, telephone number, university affiliation and status (undergraduate or graduate) should appear typed on a cover sheet separate from the title page of the manuscript. Include an abstract of 100 words or less. The author's name should not appear elsewhere on the manuscript.

6. Entries that do not conform to the above requirements will not be accepted.
7. Four copies of the manuscript and one cover sheet are to be submitted to the student paper competition Chair by June 15, 1997. No late entries will be accepted.

Heidi Kelley serves as the Student Paper Competition Chair for the 1996-97 academic year. All entries must be received by June 15, 1997. Submit entries to:

SECOND EDITION OF THE SAE DIRECTORY AVAILABLE!

The second edition of the SAE Directory was published in November 1993, and printed copies and/or computer disks were mailed to persons who placed orders. Future orders may be placed through the Book Order department of the AAA ($20.00 for AAA members, and $22.00 for non-members and institutions):

AAA Book Order Department
4350 N Fairfax Dr.
Suite 640
Arlington, VA 22203

The Directory lists members of the Society for the Anthropology of Europe who sent in their questionnaires by the end of August 1993, with information about their fieldwork experience, research interests, topics on which they would be willing to speak, and membership in similar organizations. Useful as a networking tool, the Directory lists telephone and fax numbers as well as e-mail addresses.

The indexes and analysis provided by Susan Parman indicate past, present, and future interests in the anthropology of Europe. You can find out:

- * which universities trained current Europeanist anthropologists (the most frequently listed Ph.D.-granting university was UC Berkeley, followed by Indiana)
- * where most fieldwork in Europe was done (Spain)
- * who is doing (or interested in doing) what kind of research today (geographical area and subject topic). Categories were generated by the contributors, so the Directory is a cognitive map of current anthropological research interests in Europe (with categories as diverse as "Bardic and Druidic Inventions of Traditions," "European Community," and "Turks in Europe").

SYLLABI RESOURCE PACKETS AVAILABLE FOR SALE

CALL FOR PAPERS

* THE INTERNATIONAL UNION OF ANTHRO- POLOGICAL AND ETHNOLOGICAL SCIENCES

The 14th International Congress of Anthropological and Ethnological Sciences (ICAES) "The 21st Century: The Century of Anthropology" will occur from July 26 to August 1, 1998, at The College of William and Mary, in Williamsburg, Virginia. The Congress, coinciding with the centenary of the Torres Straits Expedition of 1898, has three specific purposes: to reflect on the accomplishments and lessons of the past one hundred years of anthropology; to examine the challenges of anthropology in the next millennium; and to explore how to incorporate the discipline's perspective in public policy implementation, knowledge application, education, information dissemination and applied areas.

The Congress will begin with the key note address and the Mario Zamora public lecture on the hundred years of Anthropology. During the Congress forty concurrent symposia and scientific sessions will be held to assess the state of the arts in World Anthropology and to define urgent issues and challenges of the 21st century. The second plenary sessions will explore possible directions and roles of anthropology and anthropologists in solving human problems in the next millennium. This Congress will be future- and action-oriented. The IUAES particularly welcomes proposals for symposia, scientific sessions and paper abstracts which will discuss strategies for improving the global human community.

Paper abstracts are still being solicited with the deadline for receipt of such abstracts being October 15, 1997. The E-mail address of The 14th Congress Local Organizing Committee is:

ORGANIZATIONS and INSTITUTES

* INSTITUTE FOR ADVANCED STUDY (The School of Social Science)

The School of Social Science each year invites as members some fifteen to eighteen visiting scholars who constitute a genuinely interdisciplinary and international group. A doctorate is required, and memberships are awarded at the junior and senior levels. Visiting Members are expected to pursue only their own research, but the School organizes a weekly seminar at which Members as well as invited guests present their on-going work. Although the School is not wedded to any particular approach, it encourages social science with an historical and humanistic bent and entertains applications in history, philosophy, literary criticism, literature, and language, as well as in the traditional fields of social science.

For the next three or four years, the School will be considering the process of globalization and the different kinds of local responses to it. How are the countries of the world becoming more alike . . . at the same time as their differences are ever more insistently emphasized and acted out? In 1998-99, our focus will be on political economy, on the interrelated processes of economic globalization and political change, as they are manifest in various parts of the world: Western and Eastern Europe, Asia, Africa and Latin America.

Fellowship support is provided by funds from private donors and foundations, the National Endowment for the Humanities, and the Institute for Advanced Study. Distribution of the grants among successful applicants is made by the School of Social Science. Applications from scholars with relevant concerns who have support of their own, in whatever form, are equally welcome.

For information and application materials, write to:

Administrative Officer
School of Social Science
Institute For Advanced Study
Princeton, NJ 08540

Completed applications must be received by November 15, 1997. No applications will be considered from those who have not received the PhD by the November 15, 1997 deadline.

The Institute for Advanced Study was founded in 1930 as a community of postdoctoral scholars where intellectual inquiry could be carried out in the most favorable circumstances. It provides libraries, offices, seminar and lecture rooms, subsidized restaurant and housing facilities, and some secretarial and word-processing services.

* EUROPEAN JOURNAL OF SOCIOLOGY

The European Journal of Sociology continues the well-established European tradition of historical and comparative sociology. The journal's unique outlook is particularly well-suited to exploring the current social, political and economic upheavals underway in Europe today, with such recent articles as "Russian Patience: A reasonable Behavior and a Social Strategy" by Vladimir Shlapentokh, and "The State in Market Transition: From Bargaining to Markets in Post-Communism" by Henryk Domanski and Barbara Heyns. The scope of the European Journal of Sociology extends beyond Europe to comparative studies of societies worldwide and throughout history. Articles are published in English, French or German. Subscriptions for the twice-yearly journal are $119 for institutions, $66 for individuals, and $53 for members of the British and American Sociological Associations. To subscribe, please contact:

* INNOVATION: THE EUROPEAN JOURNAL OF SOCIAL SCIENCES

The main challenge faced by European social sciences at a time of rapid societal transformations is undoubtedly that of combining critical analytical thought with integrative pragmatic thinking, while also bridging gaps between disciplines and sub-disciplines on a cross-national basis. Related to this, there is a necessity to establish European fora for exchanging views and research experience on interrelated topics of interest to and significance for the social sciences. This objective is successfully met by the international research journal Innovation: The European Journal of Social Sciences, the official journal of the European Association for the Advancement of Social Sciences and The Interdisciplinary Centre for Comparative Research in the Social Sciences. Innovation covers issues in the following thematic areas:

- The socio-political, economic and cultural implications of the process of European integration
- Aspects of the process of transformation in Central and Eastern Europe following the breakdown of communism
- Migration and multiculturalism, including topics related to nationalism and multi-ethnic societies more generally

- Applied social and urban policy, including lifestyle and health-related research
- Communication and the making of culture, including the role of the media as well as the social impact of advanced communication technologies
- The role of teaching, research and development in societal transformation, the environment and the restructuring of the economic sector

Innovation is published quarterly with regular thematic issues. Its contents include peer-reviewed research, theoretical papers and research notes. In addition to being one of the few general European social science journals with a wide readership in both Western and Eastern Europe, Innovation guarantees rapid publication of papers. Contributions to the journal are welcome. Please send three copies of your manuscript to the Editors:

* EUROPEAN GYPSIES: SURVIVAL AGAINST ALL ODDS

Katherine C Donahue
Plymouth State College

Isabel Fonseca. Bury Me Standing: The Gypsies and Their Journey. New York: Vintage Books, 1996. 322 pp.

"Never ask questions and don't wear short skirts."

Isabel Fonseca (p. 14) claims this advice, given her by an anthropologist who worked with Gypsies in Madrid, was the best she got as she started gathering information on the Gypsies of eastern Europe. "Asking is no way to get answers." Fonseca seems to have found some answers.

Isabel Fonseca's book Bury Me Standing, originally published by Knopf in 1995, is now available in paperback. Fonseca writes with flair and style. She has a sense of humor. Written for a lay audience, the book is nevertheless one which does not fall into over-romanticization of Gypsy life. Fonseca has an anthropologist's nose, and eye. She lived in a Gypsy suburb of Tirana, Albania, one summer; spent time in Hungary and Slovakia and Romania. She learned the language, frustratingly difficult as words in its numerous dialects have multiple meanings. She covers recent events in Gypsy lives in post-communist eastern Europe, and then moves into a history of the travellers, from Lithuania to Germany to Albania. Her discussion of meticulous Nazi ethnography, the taking of 30,000 genealogies, is chilling. The photographs taken by Nazi investigators make one wonder how many of those photographed survived. Not many. The fact that there may be thirteen million Gypsies now is pure testimony to raw grit and an ability to survive despite racism, settlement, desettlement, mixed and unsure political and social policies, and direct attacks since the end of Communist regimes. This book was given to me by an undergraduate student. I will recommend it to others.

* BODY TALK IN ANCIENT TIMES

Katherine C Donahue
Plymouth State College

Donald Lateiner. Sardonic Smile: Nonverbal Behavior in Homeric Epic. Ann Arbor: Michigan, 1995.

In the conclusion to his book, Sardonic Smile, Donald Lateiner (1995:281) quotes Edward Sapir:

As Edward Sapir said in 1927, body language is "an elaborate and secret code that is written nowhere, known by none, and understood by all."

Those of us who have tried to decode the various meanings of body language have learned that it is no easy task. As Lateiner himself shows, the poly- and multivalence of unspoken language makes its interpretation difficult indeed. The work of Margaret Mead, Edward Hall (1959; The Silent Language), Erving Goffman, and others, has led many social scientists to take more time in decoding the symbolic aspects of bodily gestures and non-verbal communication. Michael Herzfeld and other recent anthropologists have worked in this vein, and classicists are also curious about the possibilities of analysis of body language (cf. MI Gruber, 1980, Aspects of Nonverbal Communication in the Ancient Near East, 2 vol., Rome; Ronald Newbold, 1992, "Nonverbal Communication in the Satyricon and in Apuleius's Metamorphoses," QUCC 41:127-36).

Lateiner's book begins with a Glossary of body-talk. The body of the text is broken into three parts: Part 1 on Nonverbal Behaviors generally and more specifically in Homer; Part 2 on nonverbal respect and disrespect in the Odyssey and Part 3 on nonverbal characterization in the Odyssey. The bulk of the text is devoted to the Odyssey. Lateiner treats such aspects of nonverbal behavior as heroic etiquette, as in salutation, encounter, and valediction. Heroic proxemics, as in social space and distance, are addressed. Placement of guests at tables, descriptions of the stance of suppliants, standing or kneeling, the extension of a hand, postures while gaming, are all discussed. Characterization, Lateiner argues, is also apparent through nonverbal behavior.

The more thoughtless, uncontrolled, or uncontrollable a character's nonverbal behavior, as reported by Homer, the less admirable the person displaying it. (p. 94)

The first part ends with a discussion of "Gendered Weapons: Penelope's Nonverbal Behaviors." In particular, her kiss, which forces Odysseus to reveal himself is, Lateiner argues, a "demonstration of polytropic cunning," and he suggests, makes her "comprehensible as a disadvantaged competitor in male status competitions and the ultimate trickster" (p. 278).

Lateiner's book may be useful reading for those interested in working out analyses of nonverbal behaviors. Somewhat specialized for undergraduate audiences, it would be appropriate for graduate students and others pursuing the hidden language of the body, ancient and modern.
